DESCRIPTION:

This is an introductory survey of British fiction since 1900, covering some of the important novels and novelists of the past hundred years. There is no single theme unifying our readings; rather, we will be exploring a number of interrelated questions concerning the genre of the novel and the politics of literary form; the relationship between modernism and postmodernism; and the shifting dynamics of Englishness and Britishness during a century of supposed Americanization and globalization.

All books for the course are available from Penn Book Center, 34th and Sansom. If possible, please use the editions listed below:

Ishiguro, Kazuo. Never Let Me Go. Vintage. 1400078777
Rhys, Jean. Voyage in the Dark. Norton. 0393311465
Selvon, Sam. The Lonely Londoners. Longman. 0582642647
Waugh, Evelyn. Vile Bodies. Back Bay. 0316926116
Woolf, Virginia. Mrs. Dalloway. Harvest. 0156030357

REQUIREMENTS AND GRADING:

Class attendance is required; notify me in advance if you need to miss a class. The reading load is not excessive – roughly 200 pages a week – but you will need to complete the novels in timely fashion in order to perform well on our unannounced quizzes. There will be five of these, consisting of multiple-choice and short-answer questions; your lowest score will be dropped and the others will each count 10% of the final grade. Written work will consist of a short essay or creative composition of 3-5 pages, counting 20%, and a longer essay of 7-10 pages, counting 30%. The final 10% of your grade will be based on your attendance and participation.
