

LORENE CARY

lorene.cary@gmail.com

lorenecary.com

Play:

My General Tubman*, Arden Theatre (January 16-March 1; extended twice through March 13). During her temporal lobe epilepsy “spells,” Harriet Tubman travels through time to a Philadelphia prison and brings men back to the Civil War as her Combahee River Raid spies; one falls in love and figures out how to go back in time separately to marry her.

Books:

Ladysitting: My Year with Nana at the End of Her Century (W. W. Norton & Co, 2019; paperback due June 2020). Everything changed when my grandmother moved in and our loving, funny, and complicated family shared life and faced death with her. I had to write the story to understand the loss and let it go, from free landowning progenitors in the South to my own spiritual challenge of forgiveness.

If Sons, Then Heirs (Paperback: Atria Books/Simon and Schuster, 2012)

Deeded to his ex-slave ancestors by General Sherman, Rayne Needham’s “heir property” has been held together, barely, for 50 years by his Nana Selma, now holed up in a tiny trailer on the old family farm. Rayne travels from Philadelphia to accept his inheritance: savage American story of black land ownership, family diaspora, and tragic loss.

Free! Great Escapes from Slavery on the Underground Railroad (New City Community Press/Third World Press, 2005; Kindle, 2013). Based on the records of Pennsylvania abolitionist William Still, Free’s true stories of escapes—on foot, trains, horses, boats, in mail trunks—exhibit brazenness, stealth, and courage. (YA)

Pride (Nan A. Talese/Doubleday, 1998; Anchor, 1999) This “girlfriend” novel pushes an accessible genre toward greater complexity. Written in four distinct voices, Pride explores family, addiction, class, politics, sex, and religion in black America.

The Price of a Child (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1995; Vintage, 1996) An Underground Railroad novel based on the 1855 case of Jane Johnson. A woman's escape from slavery begins her odyssey to uncompromising intellectual and spiritual freedom. Inaugural choice for One Book One Philadelphia, 2003. Curriculum guide available.

Black Ice (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1991; Vintage, 1992) Coming-of-age memoir about my experience as student, teacher, and trustee at the exclusive New England boarding school, St. Paul’s, examines class, race, gender and identity. An American Library Association Notable Book. Random House teachers guide available.

Scripts:

“The President’s House: Freedom and Slavery in the Making of a New Nation”

Opened December 2010, five LED screen presentations commemorate the lives of the enslaved Africans owned by George and Martha Washington as part of the National Park Service at Independence Mall. Filmed by Louis Massiah of Scribe Video, these screens create an immediate, emotional, fact-based experience for 5 million visitors a year.

Blogs, Essays, articles: Blog entries here. Articles have appeared in The New York Times Sunday Feature, Book Review, ThePhiladelphiaCitizen.org, VoteThatJawn.com, SafeKidsStories.com

Opera libretto: The Gospel According to Nana, culminating work of my 2017-18 American Lyric Theater's Composer-Librettist Development Program fellowship.

Senior Lecturer: University of Pennsylvania, Department of English, Philadelphia, PA: 1995-present. Mine are academically-based community service courses; see Founder, next.

Founder:

#VoteThatJawn, an online initiative featuring UPenn students' and others' writing and other arts to support youth vote in Philadelphia. In 2018, VTJ helped on-the-ground partners increase 18-year-old registration from less than 3,000 to nearly 7,000. This year's goal is to bring it to 10,000. The Jawn crowdsources stories and multimedia content for a wide audience and is now transitioning it real-world events to online.

Art Sanctuary, www.artsanctuary.org, is a community arts organization I founded in 1998 to use black arts to enrich our region, bring great contemporary black arts to schools, and create connections among artists. I stepped down in 2012. The board of directors are currently aligning Art Sanctuary with the Africa-American Museum of Philadelphia for a likely merge.

Education: 1979 Sussex University, Falmer, England, M.A., 1978 UPennsylvania, M.A., B.A.

Honorary Doctorate of Letters: Swarthmore College (2013), Arcadia University (2007), Muhlenberg College (2005), Keene State College, NH (1997), Chestnut Hill College, PA (1997), Colby College, ME (1992)

Civic Service:

Member, School Reform Commission for the School District of Philadelphia, 2011-2013
Chair, Committee for Safety and Engagement

Fellowships and Awards (partial list):

Provost's Award for Teaching Excellence by Non-Standing Faculty, 2017; Philadelphia Tribune's 2014 Most Influential African-Americans; Distinguished Daughters of PA, 2011; Civitella Ranieri Fellowship, Italy 2006; Philadelphia Award, 2004. 1990s: fellowship from The Leeway Foundation, residency at Yaddo Artists Retreat.